Stan,

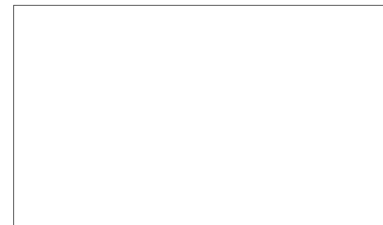

Stan:

Thank you very much for your kind words regarding my participation in the "Leading in CIA" course. Being a back-bench participant in the process that led to the creation of that course, I feel a moral commitment to try to make the course successful and useful to the students and thereby to the Agency.

You must know that the course has played to very positive reviews thusfar. My feedback from participants has been that the course content and the staff running the course are on target with what students feel they need for building future skills as managers in the Agency. You and the OT&E staff members who are involved in this course on a daily basis should take pride in the addition of another flagship course within the OT&E curriculum.

Let me assure you that I will be happy to continue to try to help make "Leading in the CIA" a well received experience. Calendar permitting, I am always ready to participate in that course - or in a variety of other venues - to add whatever I can to the syllabus derived by OT&E for a training event. Since I have exercised the privilege of criticizing "Agency training" in the past, I consider that I bear the responsibility now and in the future to devote some energy to act constructively to "make it better."

Thank you again for your plaudits. I look forward to working with you and all of OT&E in the future to conduct courses and to create new learning possibilities for Agency people.
